Conjuring: Last Rites

'The Conjuring: Last Rites' Review: Vera Farmiga and Patrick Wilson Return for a Concluding Chapter Full of Stale Scares

The Warrens wrap up their role in 'The Conjuring' universe with this latest entry in the hit horror franchise.

It's not just the floorboards that are creaky in the ninth entry in the venerable Conjuring horror franchise. It all began with the 2013 original, depicting the exploits of paranormal investigators Ed and Lorraine Warren as played by Patrick Wilson and Vera Farmiga. That indomitable duo is back for one last go-around in The Conjuring: Last Rites, and it must be said that they look tired.

And why wouldn't they be, considering the travails they've been through in their previous films? Not to mention that Ed suffered a heart attack in the last one, from which he is still recovering. As this installment set in 1986 begins, the couple are semi-retired, reduced to giving talks in virtually empty lecture halls to young people who are much more excited about Ghostbusters.

Of course, just when the Warrens thought they were out, they're pulled back in for one last case. Specifically, the real-life case of the Smurls, an extended family living in a Pennsylvania coal town who experience things going bump in the night after they make the mistake of purchasing a hideous, hand-carved wooden mirror featuring cherubs at its top.

Unfortunately for them as well as the film's viewers, it takes a long time for the Warrens to arrive. As a matter of fact, everything takes a long time in this attenuated entry clocking in at a bloated 135 minutes. It begins with an unnecessary prologue set in 1964 depicting the birth of the couple's daughter Judy, who nearly doesn't survive.

When the action shifts forward 22 years, it resembles an old-fashioned television show, with the now-grown Judy (Mia Tomlinson) and her boyfriend Tony (Ben Hardy) arriving for a family get-together that includes much comic banter, a lively game of ping-pong, and Tony nervously asking Ed and Lorraine for their blessing before he proposes to their daughter. Lorraine beams with pleasure, while Ed registers grumpy disapproval like every dad in every family sitcom ever.

It soon becomes clear that Judy has inherited her mother's psychic abilities, leading her to become aware of the Smurl family's plight. Also aware is her parent's old friend Father Gordon (franchise veteran Steve Coulter), who goes to see a bishop to request help for the beleaguered family. Not surprisingly, the visit doesn't go well.

So it's left to the Warrens, with Judy and Tony in tow, to head to Pennsylvania where the Smurls have become a media sensation. Cue the predictable spooky mayhem as everyone battles a series of evil manifestations, including dolls, that by now feel all too familiar in their jump scares. This is the kind of haunted house movie in which everything seems to happen in dark rooms, the characters armed only with flashlights, as horrific storms rage outside. It's the kind of movie in which a character enters a dark attic alone, because she's apparently never seen a scary movie before.

The Conjuring: Last Rites trades heavily in nostalgia, with numerous callbacks to past adventures and frequent visitations to the Warren's "Artifact Room," where Annabelle still resides in her locked cabinet. And since we've been watching the Warrens battle demonic entities for 12 years, they now feel like old friends. Farmiga and Wilson haven't lost their appeal, and with their relaxed chemistry they make for engaging company. But it all feels old hat by now, with returning director Michael Chaves (The Conjuring: The Devil Made Me Do It, The Nun II) failing to bring much freshness or vitality to the proceedings. The stateliness of it all feels even more old-fashioned in light of such recent audacious and original horror films as Sinners, Weapons, and everything directed by Jordan Peele.

Despite its title and final moments informing us of what happened to the real-life Warrens in their last years (complete with archival clips and photographs), the family tradition may live on, cinematically at least. Tomlinson delivers a terrifically intense performance as the psychically gifted Judy, leading one to think she could easily headline yet another Conjuring offshoot.

After the success of The Conjuring: Last Rites', Kartik Aaryan and Srileela's movie script is being rewritten, Anurag Basu gave the answer Mohit Suri's 'The Conjuring: Last Rites' is making a splash at the box office, while there is a lot of discussion about Anurag Basu's 'Aashiqui 3' (name not finalized). It is being said about this film starring Kartik Aaryan and Srileela that Anurag Basu is changing its script and now he has responded to this. 'The Conjuring: Last Rites', produced by Yash Raj Films and directed by Mohit Suri, has created a tremendous stir at the box office. From the very first day, this film of Ahan Pandey and Anit Padma is making records after records. With this, now the discussion about the upcoming film of Kartik Aaryan and Srileela has started intensifying, from the change of script to the delay in the project has also come to the fore. Now director Anurag Basu himself has spoken openly on this. Interestingly, Mohit had already revealed that the concept of 'The Conjuring: Last Rites' was similar to the script of Bollywood's 'Aashiqui' but later it was made as an independent film. Now there is talk of the next film of the 'Aashiqui' franchise 'Aashiqui 3' (though, the name of the film is not finalized yet) which is directed by Anurag Basu. Kartik Aaryan and Srileela are in the lead roles in this film. 'The lead role of both of us is a rockstar' After the success of 'The Conjuring: Last Rites', recently rumours of delay in the upcoming film of Kartik Aaryan spread due to changes in the script. However, Anurag Basu has now spoken clearly on these speculations. Talking to 'Mid-Day', he said, 'Mohit and I are very close. I am happy with the success of his film. The only similarity in our films is that the lead role of both of us is a rockstar, the rest of the stories of both are very different.' 'The Alzheimer's aspect was known in The Conjuring: Last Rites' He rejected the claims of reshooting or rewriting the scenes of the film and said, 'The girl in my film does not have dementia or any other disease. I was aware of the Alzheimer's aspect in The Conjuring: Last Rites', so there is no need to repeat it in my story.' About 40% of the shooting of this film has been completed Anurag also told that about 40% of the shooting of this film has been completed. He further said, 'In August and September, we are planning another schedule in which Karthik will be seen clean shaven. Currently, he is shooting for his other film (Tu Meri Main Tera Main Tera Tu Meri), which requires a different look. Continuity is the only challenge. Once he completes it, we will start preparing for the next phase.'
