

Dear Friends of Forensics:

Greetings from Moraine Valley Community College, we would like to invite you to participate in the Appel Quest Forensics Tournament on Friday and Saturday, October 24th & 25th, 2025.

IPDA will be offered on Friday LIVE ON CAMPUS. (Palos Hills, Illinois)

Individual Events will be offered on Saturday LIVE ON CAMPUS. (Palos Hills, Illinois)

We will be holding both a VARSITY and a NOVICE (any 4-year competitor in their first two years of competition may enter the novice division and any community college student may enter the novice division) Tournament. We are pleased to offer 13 different events. A novice division will be offered for all events with sufficient entries. For those events without sufficient entries for a separate division, a novice final will still be held based upon results from the open division if entries allow. Competitors who place into the open final will not be eligible for novice division final.

Our Halloween themed tournament is an opportunity for students to experience competition in a friendly environment. The novice division at our tournament is a chance for beginning competitors to compete within their own experience level. A novice will be defined as any 4-year competitor with less than four full semesters of college competition experience or any community college competitor. Please note: coaches who wish to enter novice competitors into the open division may do so. Since this is one of the first tournaments of the year, we encourage coaches and judges to be helpful and understanding to these competitors who are just beginning this amazing activity.

We are offering a unique event: Cross-Squad Improvisation (CSI). Please read the enclosed sheet for details and rules. As always, this is a great opportunity for students to discover some new levels of creativity and meet and work with students from other teams! (In this event, there will not be two divisions.)

On Friday and Saturday, we will be live on campus, but using electronic ballots. Judges are responsible for bringing a laptop or I-pad device for using electronic ballots. Information on rules, fees, registration, awards, tournament schedule and food are listed below. Please note that the Friday and Saturday tournament is being held on campus in the "A" Building. Please park in the A parking lot.

We hope to see you in October. If you have any questions, please give me a call or send an email,

Krista Appelquist, John Nash, Jeff Rieck & Damian Samsonowicz

P.S. Entries are due Tuesday, October 21st by 5:00 p.m. Please use <https://forensicstournament.net/MoraineValley/25> to register.

Experimental Event: Cross-Squad Improvisation (CSI)

Event description: Students will enter this event as an individual. Once at the tournament, they will be paired with a partner from another team. Thirty minutes before their performance, the pair will draw an improv scenario which includes a place & a relationship (I.E. siblings camping in a tent out in the woods). They can confer & brainstorm with each other for thirty minutes; no external information or computers may be used. The pair will then perform their scene for the judge. Although students will be performing as a pair, they will be ranked individually. For final rounds the top INDIVIDUALS will advance, not necessarily the top teams. For each round, NEW improv teams will be formed. A team will consist of at least 2 people. In the final round, students will be ranked as a team.

Important Rules:

- The time limit is 7:00; at 5 min, the judge will give a "two minutes left" hand signal, then "one minute left," and :30 if needed.
- Unlike duo, no "introduction" is needed; the performance should make it clear what the scene & relationship is
- No double entry with extemporaneous speaking.
- Students may enter another event but must go to improv first. Sign in to your other round so the judge knows. ISIS draw will be same time/place as extemp draw, TBA at the tournament.
- No manuscripts, props, notes or black binders may be used. Chairs may be used if needed.

Suggested Judging Criteria:

- Performers do NOT have to use "off stage focus" (but they may.) In improv, performers make eye contact with each other
- Focus on how well the pair created unique characters or "voices"
- Focus on how well the pair played off each other, their chemistry as a duo
- The performance does not have to be comedic but may include drama & comedy
- Confidence, delivery & polish
- Blocking is realistic and clear.... (I.E. students don't create a table and then walk through it)
- Any other creative or inventive aspects the pair demonstrated, however, the students should stay in that scene rather than invent extremely extraneous or superfluous plot-based events.

More Tips for Judges and Performers

For those of you NEW to improv, here are 5 basic hints or rules that will help the scene go well. These rules were taken from the Improv Encyclopedia. In addition to overall presentation, judges will be asked to base their decision on how well each member followed these rules.

1) Don't Deny

Denial is the number one reason most scenes go bad. Any time you refuse an offer made by your partner your scene will almost instantly come to a grinding halt. Example: Player A) "Hi, my name is Jim. Welcome to my store." Player B) "This isn't a store, it's an airplane. And you're not Jim, you're an antelope."

2) Don't ask open ended Questions

Open ended questions (like "Who are you?") are scene killers because they force your partner to stop whatever they are doing and come up with an answer. When you ask your partner an open-ended question, you put the burden of coming up with something "interesting" on your partner - so you are no longer doing a scene together but forcing one person to do more work than you are willing to do.

3) You don't have to be funny.

The hidden riddle of improv is that the harder you try not to be funny the funnier your scene is going to be. Why? Because it's the very best kind of improv scene you can do is an "interesting" scene, not necessarily a "funny" one. When you do an interesting scene, a very surprising thing happens; the funny comes out all by itself. The best ways to go are to stick to your character, stick to the story that is being told, and to stay within the reality of the scene you are playing.

4) You can look good if you make your partner look good.

When you are in a scene, the better you make your partner look the better the scene is going to be and as a direct result, the better you are going to look. Players often enter a scene with some great idea about the character they are going to play or an idea they want to do but their partner probably has absolutely no idea what's cooking and so has no idea how to react.

5) Tell a story.

Storytelling is probably the easiest rule to remember but the hardest one to do. The real magic of improv is when we see the players take totally random suggestions (like a plumber and a cab driver selling shoes in a leper colony) and somehow "make it work". If all these unrelated elements are going to come together then it's going to happen in the course of an interesting tale. So that's just what the players are going to try and do, tell us all a story.

Ranks & Awards

The top six individuals in each individual event will advance to the final round. Ties will be broken in this order: speaker points, judges' preference (where applicable), and number of firsts. We will not break an event into a semi-round unless entries in the event allow us to do so.

The top five schools accumulating the most points will receive team sweepstakes awards. Final round points (Varsity & Novice) will be awarded as follows: (Please note: For those events without sufficient entries for a separate division, a two-year final will still be held based upon results from the open division. Hosting Platform

ForensicsTournament.net (with 8x8) will be utilized for registration, competition, and tabbing on Friday. Coach and student guides can be found HERE. You will find that understanding how tournaments will be run will help put students and judges at ease.

Rules for IPDA Debate

Topic Strike: Topic strike will occur in a common draw room. Negative strikes first. Prep time begins as soon as the topics are announced/released to the opposing partners.

Debaters should strike on time. Should one debater not appear at the scheduled time, a five-minute grace period will be started. At the end of the five minutes, the topic list will be given to the debater in attendance who will choose the topic to be debate and the round will begin 30 minutes from the time of the topic selection. The absent debater will only have the prep time available that remains. If a debater fails to appear after the prep time has elapsed, they will automatically forfeit the round.

Debaters will NOT be allowed to consult any other person during prep time.

As per IPDA rules, debaters can consult paper and/or electronic research material during preparation, which may be quoted or paraphrased from notes during the round.
