A travel planning resource for visitors with sensory and cognitive disorders including Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD)
Congratulations to Visit Mesa for leading the drive for our community to become the first-ever Autism Certified City in the world. Now our visitors can tailor their experiences here in Mesa, Arizona based on a scale developed to inform travelers of the sensory impact of an activity. We also have hundreds of front-of-house staff across industries trained in providing customer service to those diagnosed with an Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and their families.

The ASD community is growing and underserved with nearly 32 million travelers looking for a safe environment to enjoy a family vacation. Mesa is speaking loud and clear for these families around the country and around the world as we welcome them to our destination and make history.

One question you may have is, why Mesa? The answer is that one of Mesa’s core values is compassion. When there is a need in our community we step up. Our businesses, non-profits, government agencies, faith-based organizations and community groups come together to do the right thing.

Mesa truly has something for everyone from the breathtaking beauty of the Sonoran Desert to the extraordinary mix of arts, museums, shops and restaurants downtown, we serve up an authentic Arizona experience for visitors of all ages and abilities.

Sincerely,

John Giles
Mayor
Mesa, Arizona
We embrace all perspectives.

Proud to be the World’s First Autism Certified City.

@VISITMESA / #VISITMESA
One of Visit Mesa’s most ambitious efforts to date has been the journey toward becoming the first-ever Autism Certified City in the country. Since we started this journey, we immediately began to raise the profile of Mesa, Arizona and the many businesses that we have shepherded to earning their Certified Autism Center (CAC) status. On a global stage, this is big news for us and for you as our welcome visitor. We hope you will see and feel the dedication behind earning this new Class A designation throughout your stay. It has been overwhelming to witness the support for this initiative as we watched all the best facets of our community come together to support the ASD community here in Mesa.

It’s not an understatement to say that millions of travelers are impacted by autism. In 2018, the Centers for Disease Control determined that approximately 1 in 59 children is diagnosed with an Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). With a 600% increase in autism diagnoses in the U.S., this is the fastest growing developmental disorder in the world. Visit Mesa’s progressive march to becoming the first Autism Certified City will inject a new source of visitor activity to our region as we actively serve up a destination that is ready to welcome the ASD community to unforgettable experiences throughout our city.

This movement is motivated by my own journey as a father to a son on the spectrum. When we received our diagnosis, our world was rocked. Travel is integral to our life and I’ve always felt this was a terrific opportunity to educate the hospitality industry and drive our destination toward inclusivity. I know families will feel comfortable coming to Mesa knowing our hotel staff is trained, our museum staff is trained and that we offer great sensory awareness as a destination.

All City of Mesa Parks, Recreation and Community Facilities, all City of Mesa museums, the Mesa Police and Fire Departments, the Mesa Chamber of Commerce, numerous health and wellness services, non-profits and other resources have become Autism Certified. This is on top of the many Autism Certified hotels, attractions and restaurants ready to roll out the welcome mat for you and your family. Visit Mesa is committed to your needs and ready to welcome you to City Limitless®!

Sincerely,

Marc J. Garcia

Visit Mesa
Extra training so you feel extra comfortable.

Proud to be the World’s First Autism Certified City.
When we connected with Marc Garcia at Visit Mesa at the onset of this project, we were thrilled to hear about his vision for their community. Working together on this ground-breaking initiative has been rewarding and exciting, particularly seeing so many vital organizations moving forward toward a common goal - true inclusion and accessibility.

Over the last two decades, IBCCES has worked with thousands of individuals and groups who provide care and services to individuals with autism and other cognitive disorders. As the need continues to grow for understanding and inclusion, so does the need for training and certification. We know that autism-friendly is not enough, and that certification brings a whole new level of awareness and education to accessibility efforts. Our comprehensive, evidence-based process includes educational trainings and knowledge assessments of common behaviors and sensory considerations associated with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). Many Mesa area businesses also participated in IBCCES audits to further improve experiences for individuals with autism and we’ve developed Sensory Guides which serve as vital planning tools in advance of their visit.

There are thousands of families and individuals looking for places to visit and create memories who don’t currently feel like they have options. Visit Mesa and the regional community are changing that, leading the way for others to follow suit in the future.

We’re proud to be a partner in this amazing initiative and to claim Mesa, Arizona as the very-first Autism Certified City in the world!

Sincerely,

Myron Pincomb
Board Chairman, IBCCES
I’m a wearer of many hats.

The hat I’m most proud to wear is that of mom to three amazing boys. They’re my life, my love, and watching them grow into little men is my favorite pastime. Raising three boys has not always been easy - one of my boys has autism, one is neurotypical, and one has sensory processing disorder and childhood apraxia of speech. We have our challenges, but it makes our successes so much sweeter.

Travel has always been a big priority for our family. Despite our hurdles, we’ve learned how to travel with our sons who have anxiety, sensory issues and dietary restrictions. We’ve learned how to explore the world with as little stress and as much ease as possible.

The second hat I love wearing is that of a Certified Autism Travel Planner. I became a travel agent in 2013 so that I could use our family’s first-hand experiences with traveling with our boys and share that with other families with autism who are hoping to confidently travel with their children.

According to Autismtravel.com, 87% of families with autism don’t travel at all. The thought of travel with a child with autism can be too overwhelming for some, and they’re nervous to take the leap of money, time and energy going to a destination that may or may not be accommodating to their family’s needs.

As a Certified Autism Travel Planner, I love guiding families to destinations that are accommodating to families with children, teens and young adults on the spectrum. The best successes my clients have had have been to Certified Autism Centers, or CACs. These destinations and attractions have gone through a rigorous autism training process by the International Board of Credentialing and Continuing Educational Standards (IBCCES) to ensure that travelers with ASD are met with smiles, handshakes and most importantly, understanding.

Mesa, Arizona is the world’s first Certified Autism Destination. As of November 2019, more than 50 businesses and attractions in the Mesa area have made the commitment to go through the autism training with IBCCES to become a Certified Autism Center. And the list continues to grow as more and more organizations understand the benefits of being able to welcome ALL families to their business.

On a recent trip to Mesa, my family visited many of the newly-certified Autism Centers in and around the city and it was an amazing few days of adventure, exploration and acceptance. Mesa, Arizona is leading the way in autism travel by creating an all-inclusive travel destination for families to enjoy - with hotels, restaurants, attractions, playgrounds and parks, and outdoor adventure destinations all on the list. There’s no other place in the world where families with autism have this amount of destination choices when crafting their vacation, and I can’t wait to share our experiences with my travel clients!

After our fun-filled days of vacationing in Mesa, my 11-year old son said that he loved visiting this city because they were laying out the welcome mat for families with autism. I answered, “Yes, sweetie, they sure are!”

In my house, sun and fun are top considerations when it comes to family vacations. Of course, each of us have different interests and different ideas about where to go. Luckily a recent visit to Mesa, Arizona checked all the boxes for all of us!

And a major bonus? Mesa has a bunch of visitor attractions, businesses and city services that are going through dedicated Autism Certification to make sure the city is a welcoming place for everyone—including travelers on the spectrum.

Planning a family vacation is always a bit nerve-wracking. If you or a member of your family has an Autism Spectrum Disorder or sensory processing issues, the stakes can feel a little higher. The heightened sense of awareness or worry some feel in new places can feel compounded when traveling. We all love vacations, but disrupted routines, different food, sleeping in strange beds—it can get to be a bit much. Knowing you are visiting a place where they have made an effort to understand some of the special considerations of an ASD traveler can make all the difference.
is seen throughout the design with long walkways able to accommodate wheelchair users and the illusion of playing in the tree tops. Mesa Riverview features the latest hands-on play equipment including slides, spinners and swings allowing for hours of play time. On the edge of the park, curious climbers can test their skills and scale a 300 ft. natural linear climbing wall complete with a covered fort. We especially loved the 75-foot zip line and splash pad and child-size picnic tables. Both award-winning parks went through the IBCCES audit to assess how sensory processing issues may be affected. You can access the report for these parks and others through the City of Mesa Parks website, MesaParks.com.

For something completely different, a drive out to Arizona Goat Yoga is a wacky and unexpected excursion. During the hour-long “goga” session, the class is led through a series of poses while the goats wander happily through the field, hopping onto participants as they go. Goat yoga works best for kids who can join in the class and don’t feel too skittish around animals, as the goats jump on participants indiscriminately. Also note that the goats aren’t all babies; you may run into goats that are quite big—up to 35 lbs. You can pet those ones and let the babies climb aboard. This is animal therapy of the fun kind.

HANDS ON FUN

Sometimes kids like to do a deep dive into the “how” and the “why” of the world around us. The Arizona Museum of Natural History is the ideal size to explore during a warm Mesa afternoon. It has a wide variety of things to touch and do, without being an overwhelming size. The big hits with my guys were the animatronic figures on Dinosaur Mountain and panning for gold in the Lost Dutchman Mine—ask for a baggie to collect your loot from the staff members outside at the mine.
For iconic Arizona desert landscapes, Usery Mountain Regional Park has it all. Cactus, cactus and more cactus! Choose to hike the family-friendly Wind Cave Trail or spend your time at the Nature Center and get close access to all the desert critters and creepy crawlers. Just behind the center is “The Backyard,” an extensive piece of land where you can spot a bunch of Sonoran flora and the occasional hummingbird or heron. Check the Maricopa County Parks website for real-time programming if you want to join a family activity such as a movie in the desert or bird-watching. Find the Ranger hikes, stroller cruises or even a blacklight hunt for scorpions.

Come hungry to Jake’s Unlimited for endless food and fun for the family. Jake’s Unlimited was the first attraction in Mesa to become Autism Certified and it shows. While this is a full-sensory play zone, be sure to ask staff when you need a time out and they will find an area on site to rest. As a mom of picky eaters, the buffet options had plenty of safe choices for children with food aversions.

FOR SPECIAL INTERESTS

One of the joys of knowing someone with ASD is the chance to learn from them. I’ve been able to learn more facts than I ever imagined I’d need to know on various subjects. If you or your child’s interests revolve around sea creatures or baseball, Mesa has what you need.

The OdySea Aquarium has been working hard with various organizations to make sure they are a welcoming, comfortable place for every family. Staff members with a seahorse above the pocket on their shirts have gone through autism awareness training and are equipped to help you with your needs. With features like their Pal Place video that helps people know what to expect at the aquarium, to a room away from the hustle and bustle that’s stocked with sensory items or to autism awareness weekends that feature lower volumes and fewer people, OdySea is a great example of what welcoming autism travel looks like. My guys were taken with the Behind the Scenes Sharks tour where we enjoyed an up-close look at the inner workings of the aquarium, and the calming OdySea Voyager that lets you sit in theater-style seats and rotate through four major exhibits. If sitting for extended periods isn’t for you, visit during the hour before closing when you are free to walk through the Voyager at your own pace.

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALLGAME

If baseball is in your blood, you are going to want to plan a visit in the spring. Arizona is home to the Cactus League Association which serves as the spring training host for 15 major league teams. It’s the perfect opportunity to see pro ball in a smaller stadium for a fraction of the price of a regular season game. Sloan Park, home of the Chicago Cubs, is another Mesa attraction that completed Autism Certification. You can sit in the grass above the outfield for a bit more room and ease of movement than in the stands, and familiar food faves like Chicago dogs and deep-dish pizza are in abundance. As a bonus, it is steps from Mesa Riverview Park!

We felt welcomed and beyond at ease in Mesa, and I think you will too. It was a great feeling to know that so many businesses care enough about ASD travelers to make this kind of effort, with the added benefit of being able to relax knowing it will be ok if (or when!) things don’t go as planned.

WHAT IS GEOCACHING?

Geocaching is an outdoor treasure hunting game where players use a mobile app or dedicated GPS device to find cleverly hidden containers called geocaches. Today, there are more than 3 million geocaches in over 190 countries.
10 TIPS BEFORE YOU GEOCACHE

1. Use your eyes, hands and geo-senses
2. Look for something that seems out of place
3. Geocaches are often disguised
4. Think like a detective
5. Geocaches should never be buried
6. Look high, look low, look around
7. Respect your surroundings
8. Check the hint
9. Watch for previous activity
10. Be patient. They’re out there!
Albert Einstein once said, “Look deep into nature, and then you will understand everything better.”

I love seeing the world through my children’s eyes. To me, it is the best part about being a mom to two boys under the age of 10, Oren and Elam. When Elam was diagnosed with autism at age 3, I began to wonder if he would ever perform daily functions, much less hike a mountain. But I had it all wrong.

Nature reveals everything we need to know at the exact right moment. It is not delayed. It does everything in its own time. Hitting the trails is a great reminder to go at your own pace and take in all the beauty that surrounds you.

Having a son on the autism spectrum inspires me to look at the world with compassion and inclusion and wonder. The mountains around Mesa provide a place where the boys can run and be loud and marvel at saguaros that reach to the sky. A place where we can search for lost treasure and find very real treasure in the unfolding of Mother Nature.

Since we typically hike easy-to-moderate trails, I tend to pack light. I carry a backpack with plenty of water, sunscreen, a hat, a trail map, my phone for emergencies and photos, and, of course, snacks. Oren likes to bring a pencil and tiny notebook to write in, and he loves taking pictures and playing with the compass on his phone. We wear shoes with good grips, usually sneakers since we stick to the easy trails.

Here are a few of our favorite barrier-free trails (trails designed for those with disabilities) to explore around Mesa:

Usery Mountain Regional Park

3939 N. Usery Pass Rd., Mesa
(480) 984-0032
maricopacountyparks.net

The trails at Usery Mountain Regional Park in Mesa have just enough elevation to provide spectacular views of the surrounding desert plains and rugged mountains. The Merkle Trail is a 1-mile (round trip), barrier-free trail around a smaller mountain perfect for getting a quick hike in. The interpretive trail is wide and flat making it accessible not only for those with ASD, but also for those that use strollers and wheelchairs. This is also the site for many of the park’s family programs that take place throughout the week.
San Tan Mountain Regional Park
6533 W. Phillips Rd., Queen Creek
(480) 655-5554 • maricopacountyparks.net

San Tan Mountain Regional Park has a day use trailhead perfect for accessing barrier-free trails in the Sonoran Desert. The Littleleaf Trail is an easy 0.7 mile out and back trail that highlights the beauty of the Littleleaf Palo Verde Tree. Elam’s favorite part: enjoying an apple in the shade of the green-barked tree halfway through our hike. Be sure to stop by the visitor’s center to say hello to the chuckwallas and desert tortoises in their outdoor enclosures.

Lost Dutchman Arizona State Park
6109 N. Apache Trail, Apache Junction
(480) 982-4485 • azstateparks.com

Treasure Loop is one of our favorite trails to explore at Lost Dutchman for one obvious reason: treasure! The boys love to pretend that they are treasure hunters looking for the legendary lost gold that’s rumored to be hidden in the Superstition Mountains.

It’s a little long for the boys at 2.4-miles round trip. So, we opt to move at our own pace and go about a mile to the base of the Superstition Mountains before heading back. Both Oren and Elam have been sworn in as Junior Rangers, vowing to protect the land and the plants and animals that call it home. (Pick up a packet at the Ranger Station on your way in.)
Last time we were there we had just given up on finding the lost treasure when Elam poked his arm with a stick and let out a loud cry. Two hikers heard him and called out, “Are you ok?” We assured them we were fine. One of the hikers introduced himself as Holden and pointed to the rolling hills that were covered with shade from rain clouds overhead. The rain was about two miles off and headed our way fast.

Concerned that it would make the trail slick and difficult to navigate, Holden offered to piggyback Elam down the mountain. But Elam wasn’t sure about this new friend. So, I gave him a piggyback ride while Holden carried our backpack. His brother chatted with Oren pointing out interesting things along the way, like the jumping cholla cactus. We made it back to the car safe and sound just as the rain started to fall.

This is just one example on our many hikes in the surrounding Sonoran Desert that illustrates the best thing about Mesa – here, the people are so friendly and always eager to help.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

TIPS FOR THE TRAILS

Before heading out to explore the vast Sonoran Desert, take caution. While the desert offers breathtaking scenery, it can also be unfamiliar territory for out-of-town guests not acclimated to the varied temperatures and rugged terrain. Below is a list of tips before hitting the trails.

ALWAYS PACK WATER
Avoid dehydration by drinking water often throughout your hike. A good rule of thumb is to pack one gallon of water for a full-day of desert exploring.

APPLY SUNSCREEN – OFTEN
Even in the winter months, Arizona’s direct sunlight can cause severe burns.

NEVER STRAY FROM THE DESIGNATED TRAIL
Desert terrain is rugged and unpredictable. Most parks offer maps and marked guides along the trail.

DRESS APPROPRIATELY
Desert temperatures can hit extreme highs and extreme lows in a 24-hour period. Wearing layers helps slow dehydration and limits your sun exposure. Always wear closed-toe shoes. Wearing a hat and sunglasses are also recommended.

BE ALERT!
The desert is full of critters that will attack if approached. Watch for rattlesnakes, Gila monsters and scorpions to name a few. If necessary, make noise so critters know of your presence. Be mindful of their surroundings and treat them with caution and respect.

DESERT OASIS

WATER WORKS

Think you can’t take the family to the beach when visiting Mesa? Think again! Believe it or not, water flows throughout City Limitless® and visitors have access to miles of shoreline around three lakes and the Lower Salt River. Adventurers can kayak in the shadows of towering canyon walls at Canyon Lake, take a relaxing float along the flowing river, and soak up sun at Butcher Jones Beach. For boaters and fishermen, easy lakefront access can be found at both the Saguaro and Canyon Lake Marinas. Guests can rent or purchase everything they need from a variety of outdoor outfitters throughout Mesa. As part of the Autism Certification education offered through the International Board of Credentialing and Continuing Education Standards (IBCCES), many Mesa organizations completed an audit of their place of business. This onsite review of their facility by an IBCCES expert includes a comprehensive report with suggested changes or modifications to better serve individuals on the spectrum as well as the development of Sensory Guides for activities.

IBCCES Sensory Guides help individuals determine the impact on each of the five senses that an activity or interaction may have. The goal is to empower individuals with sensory sensitivities to fully understand what to expect when visiting a location and, if needed, to adjust their visit to ensure the most positive experience. IBCCES Sensory Guides are not meant to dictate or indicate an individual's abilities or limitations, but rather to better inform individuals what to expect so they can plan accordingly. A destination mindful of all your senses.

Proud to be the World’s First Autism Certified City.
“Love, accept and plan to institutionalize him.” That’s what we were told 26 years ago at the time our two-year-old son was diagnosed with autism. Following a period of great sadness, vigilant research, therapeutic interventions of all kinds and the shock of it all, we determined that if we could not change Matt’s autism, then we had to change his world—and ours.

More than two decades later, PBS NewsHour dubbed Metro Phoenix the “most autism-friendly city in the world.” Thanks to public, private, nonprofit and philanthropic leaders and collaborators throughout the Valley, people here recognize that each of us can do something to create a kinder, more welcoming community for everyone, including people with different abilities—everywhere from neighborhoods, schools and homes to places of work, worship and fun.

Consider Marc Garcia’s epiphany on a beach vacation, when he recognized that the tourism industry can be much more accommodating to individuals with autism and their families. The result: Visit Mesa and nearly 60 other businesses (as of this writing) have completed autism training through the International Board of Credentialing and Continuing Education Standards to become Certified Autism Centers. Marc’s tireless efforts led to Mesa being named the first “Autism Certified Travel Destination” in the world.

This certification continues building the community of opportunity started 22 years ago through the creation of the Southwest Autism Research & Resource Center, launching of the Arizona Autism Coalition and development of First Place® AZ, an innovative and integrated supportive housing property in the heart of Phoenix now leasing apartments for adults with autism and other neuro-diversities, and enrolling Transition Academy students with autism.

Community building is a process. It requires vision, passion, grit, resilience and an ability to connect the dots—lots of them. It also requires sound fundamental strategies. Other things to consider in building community:

CONNECT: Get out of the “silo mentality” of one box for a specific age group and another for a different disorder. Organize by need, interests and complementary strengths to celebrate diversity that’s integrated, multilevel, multiagency and multigenerational. This vantage point produces richer experiences for everyone, as well as supports a life trajectory versus a specific destination, allowing for change and growth.

REACH OUT: Involve the broader community, not just the special needs community, in addressing pressing issues. Building community support is essential for the continuity of care and important life transitions. Coordinate among agencies at the local, state and federal levels; promote interagency collaboration, which can increase the efficiency, quality and cost-effectiveness of systems and reduce the enormous stress on individuals and their families.

SCAFFOLD: Identify and evaluate what’s already working in your community. Build and expand on your community’s assets. Collaboration, viable models and replication are all needed to create greater long-term equity, impact and sustainability.
INNOVATE: Public, private and charitable interests must be engaged. Consider how we can work together creatively to restructure the way existing government funding is allocated to housing resources for the developmentally disabled in order to grow a sustainable real estate supply over time.

MEASURE: Support the creation of new metrics to track value and quality of life outcomes. Only through collective efforts will public policy advances be possible.

LEAD BY EXAMPLE: The best way to change the undesirable statistics for individuals with autism is to work together, innovate, demonstrate success and open more doors for adults seeking homes, jobs, social connection and supportive communities.

Autism and its many related, pressing issues are not going away any time soon. But through dedication and collaboration, we are moving the needle toward enlightened and lasting change for the better—and Mesa is helping lead the way.
